THE KISSANE EXPOSE.

The Astounding Revelations Regarding Him.

THE TREMENDOUS SOCIAL AND OFFICIAL INFLUENCE ASSISTING HIM.

The San Francisco Press Absolutely Muzzled in His behalf.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 9.—The Kissane matter continues to be an absorbing topic of conversation through every paper in the city is dumb. The power wielded to throttle exposure will be understood when Roger's matrimonial connections are explained. He is married to the widow of Edward J. Sanders, who was prominent as a lawyer and politician in California in the fifties. He was a well known figure in Sacramento, and many of the old residents will remember him well as a hot-headed, impetuous man, generous to a fault, and his own worst enemy.

His two sisters are the wives of Lloyd Tevis and James B. Haggin, respectively, are the grand dames of that "exclusive" social circle formed in this city by the late Senator Irwin and the members of the Virginia colony.

A BLUE BLOODED FAMILY.

The Sanders family came from Memphis, Tenn., and are related by blood and marriage to some of the wealthiest and most influential families of the Southern States. This accounts for the efforts in various unexpected quarters to give Kissane the character of a chivalrous gentleman.

NEWSPAPERS AT BAY.

Haggin's business and personal relations with Senator Hearst were sufficient to call off the Examiner's dogs, which started off hot-footed on the trail. Tevis is connected by his daughter's marriage to Fred W. Sharon, to Frank G. Newlands and Sir Thomas Basketh, Bart., of England. From San Francisco to New Orleans and across the sea to Britain, came influences to shield Kissane. Sander's widow had two children by her first husband and they were well cared for by Rogers, who, in his princely Summer seat had played the fine old Southern gentleman to perfection.

A LAWYER'S BLUNDER.

Jesse B. Hart, who made such a blunder in his efforts to get the New York indictment against Kissane quashed, is a partner of Sullivan erstwhile District Attorney of this city and county, and now a Democratic politician. Sullivan is intimately associated with Patrick Crowley, Chief of Police, and I. W. Lees, Chief of Detectives. Thus there is a complete circle of political influences to guard Kissane from punishment and exposure. Family, social, business, legal, fraternal and police powers combine to set on the great crime.

REUBEN LLOYD IS A CITIZEN.

It is untrue that R. H. Lloyd, a brother of William Kissane is not a citizen. He is naturalized as a native of Ireland. Although 13 years younger than his brother William, Lloyd, according to General Darr's information, is 52 years old, and Rogers 66 or 67. The mother of the Kissanes, who went in this city by the name of Lloyd, is dead.

INTERVIEWED.

Your correspondent interviewed General Francis Darr last night. Said General Darr: "Kissane is, in my opinion the most gifted and dangerous power for evil on the face of the earth today. He has committed crimes enough, if committed by separate individuals, to fill a good-sized penitentiary. The public has, as yet, only heard parts and snatches of his criminal exploits. I have known him ever since 1843, and he is still the crafty, resourceful, unscrupulous villain that he was in his youth."

TRYING TO MAKE HIM DISGORGE.

"I have been in communication with him, through third parties, for eight months, trying to compel him to make restitution to those he has wronged. While temporizing with me, Hart was sent to New York to get that indictment quashed by stealth. This indictment was well guarded, however, and no move could be made affecting it without my knowing it. The consequence was that Hart was bluffed and forced into Court, contrary to instructions, hence the exposure.

A MURDER INDICTMENT.

"Attempts were also made to get the indictment for murder in Barton county, Arkansas, against Kissane quashed, but the great criminal was balked. His agents were told by the authorities that he would have to come and surrender himself up before any disposition would be made of his case. Hart was the second attempt to dispose of the indictment in New York, and my impression is that the intent was really to steal the papers.

REGARD FOR KISSANE'S FAMILY.

"For the sake of Kissane's family connections and his innocent children, I have been loathe to make a public exposure. But nothing less than the strong hand of the law will induce him to part with his ill-gotten gains, it will be brought into requisition.

A MARVELOUS STORY.

Kissane's criminal career for thirty years is the most marvelous story in the annals of crime. He was leagued with a band that for years plied the business of swindling insurance companies. Rotten, worn out vessels were bought and freighted with fictitious costly cargoes, insured for large amounts and destroyed. The burning of the Martha Washington is only one of many exploits of the kind, and attracted such general attention on account of the great loss of life.

THEIR FORGERY OUTRAGES.

Another practice of the gang, whose ramifications extended through several States, was to forge notes against very old rich men and stow them away where they would assume the appearance of age. When the parties whose names were forged died, the notes were brought forth against the estates. Members of the gang furnished all the oral testimony to supply any proof that might be needed. In this way many estates were plundered, the operations extending over half a dozen States.

WILL FIGHT TO THE BITTER END.

"I know I am watched and my footsteps dogged, but I am bound to fight this out to the bitter end. I feel certain that I would be assassinated if it were not that my enemies realize that the earth could not hold certain people in case I were murdered. Men have come to my house under the pretence of being reporters, who I knew to be agents of Kissane.

THE CRIMINAL'S BROTHERS.

So far as Henry Kissane is concerned I have never heard of his ever perpetrating a wrong in his life. Reuben Lloyd has acknowledged in the past three days that his real name is Kissane.

TRACING UP KISSANE.

General Darr said he did not believe the story of Kissane's alleged bigamous marriage, nor the story of the alleged assassination of a farmer in Missouri. In his tracing up of Kissane he could find no time or place when such a murder could have been committed. There were other equally suspicious, and tragic incidents, however, that could be well authenticated. For the present, Darr declined to allow the correspondent to view Burton's book, other than to merely look at it.

GENERAL DARR'S REPUTATION.

General Darr is a gentleman of fine appearance and elegant manners. Though old in years, he is a man of powerful physique, robust and eagle eyed. He is a man of means and unblemished reputation.

TRYING TO SHIELD THE KISSANES.

Rogers' and Lloyd's friends say that the stories of Kissane's acts of many years are greatly magnified, and that Kissane is accused of a great many things of which he really had not the slightest connection or knowledge. They assert that when the whole thing is known Rogers will appear in the light of a haunted and persecuted man, who has by many years of blameless social and business life, atoned for his early missteps. They also claim that he has been hounded persistently for years, by one set of blackmailers after another. His ruse of pretending to be killed in the Nicaragua expedition was to enable him to begin anew, a better and a nobler life.

A POWERFUL LEVER.

It is said that his high social, family and political connections have been used as a lever to compel him to yield to parties who have pursued him for purposes of blackmail, and not with any view to bringing him into Court to answer for past offenses.

THE LATEST PHASE OF THE SENSATION.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 9.—Although no allusion to the Kissane matter is made in any of the papers, it is almost the only subject of conversation here today. The Sacramento Bee sent extra editions down here with a full account of the life of Kissane, and thousands were sold on the streets, although all of the San Francisco papers refused to advertise the Bee's Kissane edition.

HAS HE FLED?

At the present hour, 4:30, the streets are full of rumors that Kissane has fled the country, escaping by way of the sea, like Harry Metz. He is reported hiding in the mountains, but his friends assert that he has never had the slightest intention of leaving the country, but will remain and fight the case to the bitter end.

INDICTMENTS FROM THE EAST.

A report is also in circulation that a requisition arrived this morning from the East for his apprehension, to take him back to Ohio or Arkansas for murder and arson, but no knowledge can be gained from official sources. The Sacramento Bee publishes further revelations this afternoon, and its special edition is in greater demand than all the other papers combined.
